

DrumBeat: May 25, 2006

Posted by threadbot on May 25, 2006 - 9:30am

Topic: Miscellaneous

Now for some wise words from the readers of The Oil Drum...

[editor's note, by Yankee] Michael Pollan, author of The Omnivore's Dilemma has a blog at the New York Times. Today's post is rather similar to Robert Rapier's ethanol post from yesterday in that it argues that corn-based ethanol is a waste of our time. He didn't mention, however, that at best corn-based ethanol could only make up 19% of the gasoline supply (so I left a link to Robert's post in the comments). Still, it's good that someone linked to the MSM is trying to debunk the corn-based E85 hysteria.

---

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike 3.0 United States License.