Jeff over at Sustainablog has just finished The Long Emergency and is looking for people to think about it with him. If you've read it, go show Jeff some love. I'm thinking of giving up on the farce that is my trying to work this afternoon to go home and finish Chapter 7.

Kunstler has an apocalyptic vision of the future, which many of you think is a non-starter for getting others engaged. Still, we all seem to think that changes in how we live are nevertheless in order. If not Peak Oil, how do we get Joe America (not to mention Corporate America) to latch on to even moderately sustainable practices?
