

TOD:UK to become TOD:Europe (and...anyone know anything about wikis?)

Posted by Prof. Goose on November 13, 2006 - 11:30pm

Topic: Site news

Tags: eu, europe, united kingdom [list all tags]

Two things the evening. First, an exciting development is in the works around here. In consultation with the existing editors of TOD:UK, we have decided to expand the scope of that operation to cover the whole of Europe. So, as of tonight, TOD:UK becomes TOD:Europe!

The new staff of TOD:Europe will include: Chris Vernon (former editor of TOD:UK, MPhys Computational Physics); Euan Mearns (formerly of TOD:UK, PhD Isotope Geochemistry: Ran isotope geochemistry company 1991 - 2001: Freelance energy analyst and journalist); Jerome a Paris (of DKos and the European Tribune, Energy banker based, yes, in Paris, France); Luís de Sousa (of picodopetroleo.net, Assistant Teacher and Researcher at an Institute of Technology in Lisbon); Rembrandt Koppelaar (chairman of ASPO-Netherlands).

That's a pretty damned amazing staff. Please help me in welcoming them to our little endeavor.

Second, if anyone knows anything about wikipedia-ish software, how to start one up, basics, etc., discuss in the comment thread. Imagine if we could accumulate all of the information at The Oil Drum in one place without giving SuperG nightmares...

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike 3.0 United States License.