

Is TOD a better journal than The Economist's Voice?

Posted by Prof. Goose on November 29, 2006 - 10:42pm

Topic: Economics/Finance

Tags: gas tax, global warming, peak oil [list all tags]

The point has been made that TOD is basically a multi- and cross-disciplinary journal with some of the best peer review around.

Well, tonight, I wanted you to see some other journal pieces. Under the fold is an online journal piece from Berkeley's online economics journal/press (no, I don't think it's peer reviewed actually, but still...). This is free for you to access with the inclusion of someone's email address. NB: I would never suggest that anyone be surreptitious about such things as using a false email address, let's just understand that.

Anyway, consider this an open thread too. You all deserve it.

---

Aaron S. Edlin (2006) "If Voters Won't Go for Taxing Oil to Conserve Energy, How Do We Do It?", The Economists' Voice: Vol. 3: No. 9, Article 2.

<http://www.bepress.com/ev/vol3/iss9/art2>

SUMMARY:

Proposition 87 reemphasized that Americans don't want the cost of driving to increase: Aaron Edlin suggests a way to reduce driving that may be more politically palatable.

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike 3.0 United States License.