

Terrorism has hit in London

Posted by Heading Out on July 7, 2005 - 11:29am

With at least seven explosions apparently having occurred in London, Tony Blair is just saying that these are terrorist attacks and that he is flying down to London. He is tying this into the opening of the G8 Summit and contrasts the goals of that meeting with the brutality of the attacks.

UPDATED There have been over 33 fatalities reported to date, and over 300 people injured. It appears that the devices used were of the same small "backpack" variety that were used in Spain. Powerful enough to do damage, but small enough that they are easy to set down and then leave under a seat, without much notice being taken during a rush hour. It also appears that there were only four explosions, three underground and a fourth on a bus.

Technorati Tags: peak oil, oil

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike 3.0 United States License.