

Various and Sundry Linkfest

Posted by Prof. Goose on February 20, 2007 - 5:45pm

Topic: Miscellaneous

Tags: energy bulletin, john robb, kurt cobb, lou grinzo, mark gongloff, wall street journal [list all tags]

It's a slow day here at TOD, so I think I'll just give you some links to consider for the evening.

First off, Over at EB today, there's a good piece by our friends Andrews and Udall from ASPO-USA with another response to CERA and its credibility.

Here's a new blog on energy over at the WSJ worth keeping an eye on (they kindly mentioned TOD today).

We haven't mentioned friend of TOD Lou Grinzo's Cost of Energy in a while, always a good read.

The folks who have been around a while know that I am big fan of John Robb's work.

And last but certainly not least, Kurt Cobb has a new one out today entitled "Why the Precautionary Principle Doesn't Cut Both Ways."

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike 3.0 United States License.