

Gristmill sees the positive

Posted by Yankee on August 24, 2005 - 6:11pm

Topic: Demand/Consumption

I love this post from Gristmill.

In light of this summer's wicked high fuel prices, CNN.com has started a daily "gas gripes" section where readers can spout off about how tough life is.

But here's a little secret -- these aren't gripes! Today's collection, especially, is a quietly inspiring list of conscious eco-choices. These reports bring a tear to the eye: I moved back to the city. I stopped driving my SUV. I vanpool. I bought a hybrid.

It's everything that Grist and a thousand other nattering environmentalists preach every day. But money is making it real -- at least for now. Hooray for capitalism! Hooray for oil! Hooray, hooray, hooray.

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike 3.0 United States License.