

We're Searching for TOD:Local Contributors...

Posted by Prof. Goose on May 17, 2008 - 1:32pm in The Oil Drum: Local

Topic: Site news

We would like to find two or three contributors for TOD:Local.

What do we want? TOD:Local should be kind of laboratory/testing ground/etc., for others to learn about ideas and solutions and failures, whether they be policy, political, or technical. It should also be a place where local and state policymakers can come together to talk about these things.

Some ideas:

1. Best Practices - Demonstrating how local communities are adapting or can adapt to peak oil by becoming more sustainable.
2. Cultural essays - with or without a local bent, but something about challenging misconceptions or misguided behavior given the implications of PO
3. Policy Process and Alternatives - What are we doing at a local/state level, and how are we doing it?

Email me at the eds box if you are interested...

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike 3.0 United States License.