Nate will be on University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point radio this afternoon from 6:30 pm to 7:30 pm EST (5:30 local) discussing the ongoing credit/financial crisis and the impact on energy. He also talks about the broader backdrop the world finds itself in, and what might be done. Topics include energy nationalization, industrial agriculture's impact on behavior, the currency crisis, and localization efforts.

It is a very good interview though Nate incorrectly stated the US oil peak in 1971 when it was 1970. Also there seems to be someone playing a tuba or a polka band in the background at times.
