

News from the blogs

Posted by Yankee on November 10, 2005 - 1:49pm

Topic: Policy/Politics

Tags: anwr, drilling, oil, oil companies, senate [list all tags]

Looks like there's plenty to keep y'all busy today, so I'll just point out a couple of relevant posts from other blogs.

A couple of days ago, Gristmill's Tom Philpott reported on a Wall Street Journal article suggesting that the Chinese demand for oil is slackening this year.

Environmental Economics has a great quote from Sen. Pete Domenici, who asked the oil company execs to explain to him how the price of oil is determined, since "my constituents and, I believe, most Americans think that somebody rigs these prices".

Both of these blogs also mention that the provision to drill in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge has been removed from the spending bill (just in case you hadn't heard).

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike 3.0 United States License.